Gilgamesh is the main character of the Epic of Gilgamesh, an Akkadian poem based on several earlier Sumerian stories, which described him as a demigod with superhuman strength and the king of the Sumerian city-state of Uruk. Most historians agree that the character was likely based on a historical king of Uruk, who probably ruled sometime between 2800 and 2500 BC and was later ...

The 11th tablet of the Gilgamesh epic is quite similar in outline to the flood narrative in Ge 6-8. Several of the major events of Ge 1-8 are narrated in the same order as similar events in the Atrahasis epic. In fact, the latter features the same basic motif of creation-rebellion-flood as the Biblical account.
